Risk Placement Services, Inc. Brightens Sandy Hill Children's Christmas

Christmas came early this year to Sandy Hill Elementary School, with a generous donation of toys for children at the school by Risk Placement Services, Inc. The gift from the company's Cambridge employees will help ensure that all Sandy Hill children have a bright Christmas.

"Someone once said, it takes a village to raise a child and we certainly are glad that our village includes RPS," said Vaughn Evans, principal of Sandy Hill. "Their donation of girls' and boys' toys put smiles on the faces of our students. We really appreciate the gifts and look forward to their generous and cooperative spirit throughout the years to come."

Dean Goodwin, Marketing Manager for RPS, said, "Our employees are excited to give back to the community, particularly to children. Many of our employees have raised their children in Dorchester County and we value the good work that the school and the administration does for our families."

RPS has an ongoing partnership with Sandy Hill Elementary as a team of its employees also volunteer at the school in support of the school's reading program.
