Saint Augustine's University visits Dorchester Career and Technology Center

Medical Services students welcomed Saint Augustine's University (SAU) School of Public Health to DCTC recently. SAU students Courtney Bonhom, Daje Broadway, Justin Bush, Craig McDaniel, Tamika Sanders, and Destiny Vinson accompanied by instructor Dr. Selena Monk were candid about what to expect while attending college and the importance of knowing themselves before entering college. Medical Services senior students learned valuable information that will aid them in the coming months as they apply and enter college while junior students heard information on how to better prepare themselves for college.

The students are excited about doing some future virtual learning activities with SAU Public Health students as well as adopting a health club that parallels to SAU "SafeFalcons" club. Much like the SafeFalcons club, the goal is for students to be ambassadors, promoting safe healthcare practices among their peers.

Justin Bush, an SAU education major also visited the Teacher Academy. He was motivational and gave great inspiration to the TAM students.
