DCPS Students Attend Minority Achievement Summit

Over eighty middle school students from Dorchester County Public Schools attended a Minority Achievement Summit held recently at University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

The keynote address was by Brigadier General Janeen L. Birckhead who spoke to the event's theme, "Preparing Today for Tomorrow's Dream". Smaller groups then convened for break-out sessions including business leaders talking to the students about the real business world; the academic background needed to succeed in college and how to prepare for it; prospects in the military; and real essential work skills.

UMES students also conducted a panel discussion during which DCPS students were able to ask questions about college life.
